

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1. A data storage medium, the data storage medium having control data stored in the form of a data structure, the data structure comprising:
- a data area that includes information for control of access to regions of the data storage medium, wherein a region is less than the entire data storage medium; and
 - a header, the header further comprising a set of bits, each bit corresponding to a form of control for access to the entire data storage medium.